Attorney General Griffin Launches One Pill Can Kill Initiative at Central Baptist College

Griffin: '[I]t is invaluable to have the knowledge and awareness that can save the life of a friend, family member, or even a stranger'

LITTLE ROCK – Attorney General Tim Griffin issued the following statement announcing that Central Baptist College has joined the One Pill Can Kill initiative:

“Today I joined Central Baptist College President Jeremy Langley to announce the kickoff of the One Pill Can Kill initiative at CBC, which is the first private institution to join the initiative.

“CBC’s enthusiasm to participate in One Pill Can Kill shows that this program is needed not only on large, sprawling campuses, but also in smaller environments. The dangers of fentanyl and opioids exist everywhere, and even where most students are unlikely to try illicit drugs, it is invaluable to have the knowledge and awareness that can save the life of a friend, family member, or even a stranger.”

After a press conference this morning at CBC, students gathered for hands-on training to learn to recognize the signs of an opioid overdose, how to administer naloxone to treat someone experiencing an overdose, and how to use testing strips to ensure that medications or beverages have not been laced with fentanyl.

President Langley added the following statement:

“We are honored to partner with Attorney General Tim Griffin to host the ‘One Pill Can Kill’ program at Central Baptist College. This initiative will have a profound impact on our campus by raising awareness among our students and community about the dangers of fentanyl and other deadly drugs. At CBC, we are committed to preparing students for lives of service and leadership, and that includes equipping them with the knowledge to make wise choices that protect their health and future. We believe this program will be life-changing and potentially life-saving for many.”

The Arkansas One Pill Can Kill initiative is funded using opioid settlement funds managed by the Office of the Attorney General on behalf of the State of Arkansas. The initiative launched in October 2024 at the University of Arkansas in Fayetteville and will expand to more college campuses throughout the school year.
