Attorney General Griffin Launches One Pill Can Kill Initiative at Arkansas State University

Griffin: 'Arkansas State's involvement will ensure that college students in Northeast Arkansas learn about the dangers of fentanyl and what they can do to help stop its deadly impact on our young people'

LITTLE ROCK – Attorney General Tim Griffin issued the following statement announcing that Arkansas State University has joined the One Pill Can Kill initiative:

“Today I joined the Arkansas State University Chancellor Todd Shields to announce the kickoff of the One Pill Can Kill initiative at Arkansas State. This is the sixth campus in Arkansas that has joined the initiative. ASU’s involvement will ensure that college students in Northeast Arkansas learn about the dangers of fentanyl and what they can do to help stop its deadly impact on our young people.”

After a press conference this morning at ASU, students gathered for hands-on training to learn to recognize the signs of an opioid overdose, how to administer naloxone to treat someone experiencing an overdose, and how to use testing strips to ensure that medications or beverages have not been laced with fentanyl.

Chancellor Shields added the following statement:

“At Arkansas State University, the health and safety of our Red Wolves always come first. That’s why we are proud to partner with Attorney General Tim Griffin to raise awareness about the dangers of fentanyl. The One Pill Can Kill campaign brings that message directly to our campus community. Together, we are empowering students with the knowledge to make safe choices and protect one another.”

The Arkansas One Pill Can Kill initiative is funded using opioid settlement funds managed by the Office of the Attorney General on behalf of the State of Arkansas. The initiative launched in October 2024 at the University of Arkansas in Fayetteville and will expand to more college campuses throughout the school year.
